ANDREINA MINICOZZI

B.A. (HONS)., M.A., J.D.

Areas of Practice: Family Law

Andreina is an experienced Family Law Lawyer with a shining track record and truly benevolent character. She graduated summa cum laude at York University with a major in political science. She later completed her law degree at the University of Ottawa and a Masters' degree from the Norman Patterson School of International Affairs (NPSIA) with an M.A. and J.D. designation in 2013.

Andreina understands the stress that comes with needing a family law lawyer and works to make such a difficult time go smoothly with compassion and expertise. Out of respect for her clients, Andreina is always considerate, yet realistic when advising on the next steps of solving their matters. Andreina adopts a sensible approach when reviewing litigation matters or negotiating settlements, and does not shy away from confrontation in order to ensure her clients receive the best possible solutions. Andreina's passion for family law and social justice is fueled by her background and empathetic personality. She currently volunteers at the Canadian Lawyers for International Human Rights, a organization that promotes international human rights from a Canadian perspective. Her talent and knowledge in the field have in the field have led her to publish articles pertaining to human trafficking and how it has evolved over the past decade in Canada.

Andreina is focused on alimony and spousal support claims, child support, custody and access, dissolutions, divorce, domestic violence, marital property, mediation, arbitration, prenuptial agreements, parent's rights and independent legal advice for all general family law matters.

When Andreina is outside of the office, she enjoys spinning, running, rock climbing and learning about international wines. In addition to English, Andreina is fluent in Italian and Spanish and can provide legal services in those languages as well.
