Featured Area of Practice: Municipal Law, Land Use Planning & Development

Other Area of Practice: Commercial Litigation, Commercial Real Estate, Construction Law, Municipal Law, Land Use Planning & Development, Real Estate

Adam Grossi is a partner at Devry Smith Frank LLP ("DSF") and is the head of the commercial real estate and development law group at DSF.

Adam's practice encompasses a variety of real estate and land development matters. Adam advises developers, vendors, lenders, and borrowers in respect to their broad range of legal needs. He also has extensive experience in all aspects of development projects.

Adam greatly values the personal relationships he has with his clients, whether they are individuals or large institutions. Adam has long-standing relationships with his clients, who view Adam as being an integral part of their businesses from an advisory perspective. As a result and due to Adam's practical and business-driven approach, Adam very often provides legal and strategic advice on all matters that affect his clients' businesses. Adam is very attentive to his clients' needs and prides himself on the fact that he provides prompt legal advice. Adam assists his clients to plan and strategize with respect to the anticipation of any and all future issues or hurdles that may influence the course of their businesses. Adam works closely with his clients to help achieve their goals, with particular emphasis on the development projects that his clients are involved in.

Adam is a member of the Toronto Construction Association and the Construction Law Section of the Ontario Bar Association. Adam is also actively involved with various charitable foundations within his community.
